

STOCK MARKET

Contrary to the selling pressure of the previous session, the VN-Index opened with a slight upward gap, then moved sideways within a narrow range during the morning session, and surged in the afternoon session. The VN-Index closed at 1,318.22 points, up +1.04% compared to yesterday. Market breadth leaned towards the positive side with 17 out of 18 sectors advancing. Leading sectors driving the uptrend included: Financial Services, Retail, Information Technology, and Chemicals, while the Oil & Gas sector showed negative performance. Foreign investors turned to net buying of approximately 393 billion VND across all three exchanges, after 10 consecutive sessions of net selling. The rising liquidity alongside the index's gain suggests a continued short-term uptrend, though the 1,315-1,320 range remains a strong resistance, so investors are advised to trade cautiously during the session.
