GLOBAL STOCK MARKETS

European equities surged on deferred tariffs and ECB's monetary easing policies.

Meanwhile, markets expressed concern that Prime Minister Trump's policy stance could fuel inflationary pressures, creating challenges for the Fed—as noted in remarks by Chairman Powell. U.S. equity indices weakened after a week of recovery, while European markets rallied on deferred tariff threats, interest rate cuts, and expectations of fiscal stimulus. Gold continued its impressive upward streak, setting consecutive new records, while the DXY Index remained under downward pressure.

- U.S. equity indices declined by an average of 2% over the five trading sessions ending April 18; EU600 rose +4.0%, Nikkei 225 +3.4%, and CSI 300 +0.8%.

- The commodity index increased by 1.3%, with notable gains in energy (Crude oil +7.7%), base metals (Lead +3.3%, Nickel +7.3%), and precious metals (Gold +4.3%, Silver +4.2%).

- The U.S. Dollar Index (DXY) fell another 0.7%, and 10-year U.S. Treasury yields eased to 4.33%.

China's Q1 GDP grew 5.4%, reflecting solid economic momentum amid global uncertainties driven by new U.S. tariff policies. Growth was supported by a 4.6% YoY rise in retail sales and a 6.5% YoY increase in industrial production. Following trade probes into semiconductors and pharmaceuticals, the U.S. Department of Commerce launched a new investigation into critical minerals—signaling the continued escalation of the trade war, despite a temporary 90-day suspension of retaliatory tariffs to allow for negotiations. This situation places the Federal Reserve in a policy dilemma, as Chairman Powell warned of “higher inflation, lower growth, and an unclear policy path.” The policy divergence has widened, with the ECB cutting its key rate for the 7th time, down to 2.25% last week.

China 1-year and 5-year interest rates; IMF meeting for 7 days from April 21-27; PMI of Australia, UK, Japan, EU, US; Retail sales of Canada, UK; Sales of used homes, unemployment claims of US; focus of AGM season of listed companies are the information to pay attention to next week.

VIETNAM STOCK MARKET

VN-Index Moves Sideways Amid Sector Rotation in Large-Cap Stocks

The VN-Index shifted into a sideways trading pattern, edging down 0.2% with average daily trading value declining by 21% compared to the previous week. The market entered a state of equilibrium, awaiting supportive catalysts, leading to divergent trading activities driven by Q1 earnings results disclosed during the AGM season of listed firms.

- The GEX-related stocks posted strong gains, while VIC-affiliated stocks initially supported the index early in the week but reversed and declined by the end of the week. This shift transferred index leadership to the banking sector.

- Market breadth was neutral, with 50% of stocks on the HoSE advancing. Although there was no clear sector leadership, a few groups of stocks posted notable gains of over 10%.

- Foreign investors significantly increased their net selling activity, from USD 84 million to USD 188 million, with VIC being the primary target of these outflows.

In terms of policy developments, the government signed a decision to approve the revised Power Development Plan VIII (PDP8). The plan aims to meet power demand in line with a targeted 10% annual GDP growth during 2026–2030, raising commercial electricity output to over 500 billion kWh and striving for 50% of office buildings and 50% of households to install rooftop solar by 2030. The plan prioritizes renewable energy sources—particularly wind and solar—and schedules the operation of Ninh Thuan 1 & 2 nuclear power plants (capacity: 4,000–6,400 MW) between 2030 and 2035. While coal power projects will continue as planned through 2030, they will gradually shift toward biomass and prioritize natural gas for electricity generation. PDP8 reinforces the strategic transition toward clean, renewable, and environmentally friendly energy.

Given the current sensitive phase of the market, where short-term trends remain unclear, investors are advised to prioritize risk management and maintain a balanced portfolio allocation to navigate potential near-term volatility.

WEEKLY TOPIC: Forecast of the number of shares to be bought/sold by ETFs tracking the VN30 Index

On April 16, 2025, the HoSE announced the quarterly revision of the HOSE-Index family for April 2025. These changes will take effect from May 5, 2025, meaning that April 28, 2025, will be the final trading day for portfolio rebalancing by ETFs tracking these indices.

Notably, the VN30 Index saw several significant adjustments, which have been thoroughly analyzed by BSC Research in the report dated March 5, 2025 (see the reference section for the report link).

Based on the newly released data from HoSE, BSC Research provides the following forecast of share volumes to be bought or sold by ETFs tracking the VN30 Index, as shown in the table below:

(*Note: On Monday next week (April 21, 2025), the VNDiamond Index will announce its updated portfolio, BSC Research will provide a comprehensive update on projected buy/sell volumes of

Comments:

- In week 15, the SBV issued bills worth 00.0 billion VND, and simultaneously bought securitites worth 63,678.8 billion VND. In total, the SBV's net flow on OMOs was -8,356.6 billion VND
- Interbank interest rates narrowed their trading range, stabilizing around in 4.0% - 4.5% range.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS: The VN-Index fluctuated within a narrow range, forming a temporary accumulation zone during its short-term recovery phase

Daily Chart: The market exhibited alternating gaining and losing sessions, accompanied by wide candlestick wicks within a trading range of 1,200–1,240 points, alongside narrowing liquidity. This suggests a gradual stabilization after the sharp volatility observed over the past two weeks. Buy-side demand emerged at lower price zones, while sector rotation among leading stocks became more apparent as the VN-Index approached higher resistance levels. This pattern reflects both a wait-and-see sentiment ahead of supportive news and the pivotal role of index-leading groups in market direction. Technical indicators remain at low levels, while the Bollinger Bands stay wide, signaling that the market is still in a high-volatility zone.

Notable technical features on the daily chart include:

- RSI remains subdued at 43.
- The MACD line is narrowing its gap with both the signal line and the zero axis. Trading liquidity dropped by 21% compared to the average of the previous four sessions.
- The VN-Index is trading below all major moving averages—namely the SMA 20, SMA 50, SMA 100, and SMA 200—and is gradually approaching the weekly SMA 200.

Conclusion: During the past week, the VN-Index staged a brief rebound, filling the 1,228-point gap on low liquidity, before transitioning into a sideways trading pattern, forming a narrow short-term consolidation range. This market behavior reflects a short-term equilibrium, with the next price movement remaining uncertain and largely dependent on upcoming supportive news flows and the performance of index-leading stocks in the coming week. The V-shaped recovery scenario for the VN-Index remains intact if the index breaks above 1,240 points. However, should it fall below 1,200 points, the pattern may shift toward a W-shaped formation, especially if such a move is accompanied by high-volume.
