GLOBAL STOCK MARKETS

Positive tariff developments pushed U.S. equity indices closer to their yearly highs

The S&P 500 extended its winning streak to four consecutive sessions, now trading just 3% below its all-time high, supported by optimism that U.S.–China trade negotiations could help curb short-term economic slowdown and inflation pressures. These expectations also influenced movements in the commodities and currency markets last week.

- U.S. equity indices rose an average of 4.8% over the five sessions ending May 15; EURO STOXX 600 +2.3%, Nikkei 225 +0.9%, CSI 300 +1.1%.

- Commodity index climbed +1.4%, led by energy (oil +1.3%), metals (iron ore +4.2%, tin +4.0%), and agriculturals (cocoa +15.8%, rice +4.1%). In contrast, precious metals declined (gold -3.5%, silver -1.3%).

- The DXY dollar index rose 0.4%, marking a second consecutive week of gains, while the U.S. 10-year Treasury yield edged up to 4.41%.

April's U.S. CPI rose 0.2% MoM and 2.3% YoY, lower by 0.1 percentage points compared to both the previous month and forecasts. Shelter costs, which rose 0.3%, contributed to half of the CPI increase. Inflation continues to ease, and the risk of reacceleration has narrowed following the cooling of U.S.–China trade tensions on May 12, after two days of negotiations in Switzerland. The U.S. agreed to reduce tariffs on Chinese goods to 30% (from 145%), while China lowered tariffs on U.S. goods to 10% (from 125%) for a period of 90 days. Both parties also established a mechanism to continue addressing trade disputes. This marks the most constructive progress since the U.S. launched its new tariff policy, though non-tariff barriers and Chinese state subsidies remain key hurdles to a long-term agreement. Key economic data to watch next week includes: China: Industrial production, retail sales, unemployment rate, 1-year & 5-year loan prime rates. Australia: RBA policy minutes and interest rate decision. Canada & UK: Retail sales, CPI. UK, EU, U.S.: PMI data. U.S.: New home sales.

VIETNAM STOCK MARKET

Market extends its uptrend, led by banking stocks

The VN-Index rose 2.7% this week, with liquidity up 28% compared to the previous week. Market momentum was driven by strong gains in banking stocks and the return of foreign net buying, helping the index break through the psychological 1,300-point level swiftly. Sector movements became more defined, despite profit-taking pressure in the last two sessions of the week.

- Banking stocks contributed 4 out of the top 5 contributors to the VN-Index, accounting for around 56% of the index's total gain this week. The VIC group saw mixed performance after strong gains in the prior week, with VIC contributing +3.3 index points, while VHM pulled back -4.1 points.

- Market breadth was strong, with 16 out of 18 sectors posting gains. The Travel & Leisure sector outperformed with a gain of over 20%, while Insurance and Healthcare edged down slightly.

- Foreign investors continued to be net buyers, with a net buying value of USD 107 million, up from USD 49 million the previous week.

Resolution No. 124/NQ-CP outlines 10 key policy priorities to maximize the achievement of Vietnam's 2025 socio-economic development goals. Key focus areas include: Promoting economic growth while maintaining macroeconomic stability, controlling inflation, and ensuring major economic balances; Accelerating legal and institutional reform, including restructuring the two-tier local government system; Speeding up public investment disbursement; Advancing manufacturing and processing industries, along with supporting industries; Diversifying export markets; Restructuring the economy based on productivity-driven growth, technological innovation, and other strategic goals. Despite complex international developments, the Government remains steadfast in pursuing high growth and structural reform in 2025. The market is revisiting previous highs thanks to sector rotation among large-cap stocks. However, the short-term trend remains uncertain amid growing profit-taking pressure. Investors are advised to take partial profits during strong rallies and maintain a flexible short-term trading approach.

WEEKLY TOPIC: On the settlement cycle and stock market upgrading

According to the VSDC Chairman's remarks in August 2022: “Vietnam’s current T+2 equity settlement cycle (with final settlement completed by 11:30 AM on T+2) is aligned with international practices. In fact, our transition from T+3 to T+2 occurred even earlier than some major regional markets—Japan only adopted T+2 in 2017, while Thailand and Singapore made the shift in 2018” (Refer to Table 01 for the detailed timeline of settlement cycle adjustments in Vietnam’s stock market).

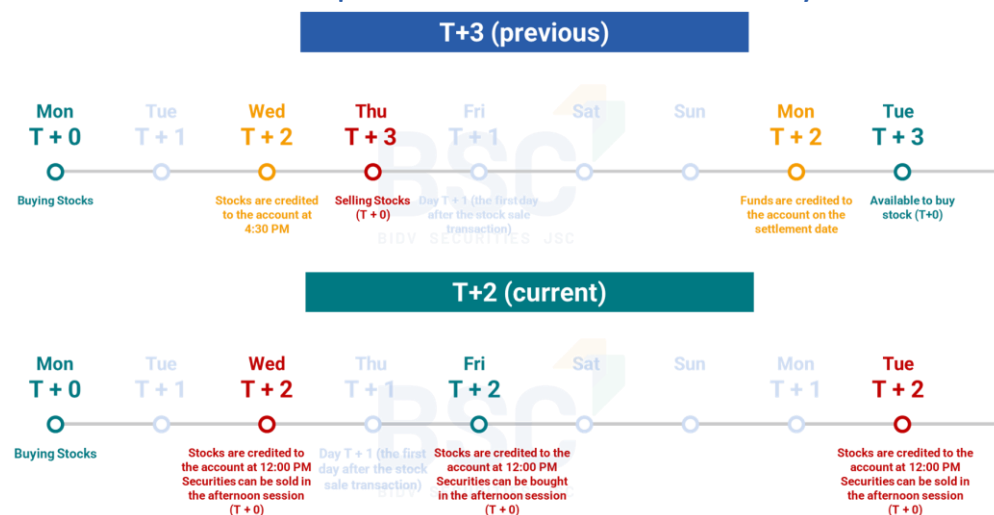

Regarding recent market discussions on shortening the settlement cycle from T+2.5 to T+2, successful implementation would require accelerated coordination in the clearing and settlement processes among VSDC, securities firms, and settlement banks—specifically, to ensure accounting is completed by 8:30 AM on T+2, or potentially by 4:30 PM on T+1. In BSC Research’s view, this transition will necessitate a preparatory period to develop coordinated procedures among market participants. This is especially important as the new KRX system has only just been launched on May 5, 2025, and will require a period of stable operation before further shortening of the settlement cycle can be realistically pursued.

Global Trend Toward Shorter Settlement Cycles:

In May 2024, the stock markets of the United States, Canada, and Mexico officially shortened their settlement cycles from T+2 to T+1. Several other developed markets have also been conducting studies to follow this global trend (see Table 03).

The shift toward a T+1 settlement cycle is expected to become a common global standard. However, moving toward T+0 settlement presents significant implementation challenges. According to research conducted by the Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association (SIFMA), the risks associated with T+0 settlement outweigh the potential benefits. Even the transition from T+2 to T+1 poses considerable challenges, as the anticipated increase in trade failure rates during the transition phase remains a key concern (see Table 04).

On the Prospects of Vietnam’s Stock Market Upgrading: Regulators have been actively refining the legal framework to facilitate greater accessibility for foreign investors (FII) participating in the market. The final step lies in the actual experience of foreign investors with these newly implemented measures, which will serve as a basis for FTSE’s review and potential announcement during the September 2025 reclassification cycle.

According to case studies of countries that previously achieved an upgrade, Saudi Arabia, during the period of 2017–2018, also adjusted its settlement cycle from T+1 to T+2 in order to align with global practices.

TECHNICAL ANALYSIS: VN-Index surpassed the psychological 1,300-point level, with correction pressure emerging in the final session of the week

Daily Chart:

The VN-Index broke out strongly in the first session of the week, surpassing the 50-day SMA and fully filling the downside gap from April 3. Improving liquidity supported the index's advance past the psychological 1,300-point level, moving toward the previous accumulation zone before the tariff-driven correction. The index has been tracking the upper Bollinger Band, alternating between doji candles and bullish candles, indicating bullish momentum remains dominant.

The late-week pullback, accompanied by low liquidity, does not invalidate the current short-term recovery trend.

Key technical signals on the daily chart:

- RSI increased from 57 to 62.
- MACD remains above the signal line and above the zero line. Liquidity surged 28% compared to the previous week's average daily volume.
- The VN-Index remains above the 20-day, 50-day, 100-day, and 200-day SMAs.

Conclusion:

The VN-Index has returned to its recent short-term peak after several directional sessions and a gap-fill recovery. While profit-taking pressure emerged in the final session of the week, the index still held above the key 1,300-point level. This wave of profit-taking could lead to the formation of a new consolidation zone or a short-term correction. At present, it remains unclear whether the index is in wave c of an a-b-c recovery, or wave 3 of a new bullish cycle. Nonetheless, the market is undergoing its strongest rally since the beginning of the year. A clearer bullish structure, such as an extended wave 3 or wave 5, could be confirmed if the upcoming correction does not push the index below 1,270 points.
