

STOCK MARKET

The VN-Index fell to the 1,600–1,610 range today before bottom-fishing demand pushed the index to rebound and close at 1,657.75 points, up nearly 15 points compared to yesterday. The number of advancing and declining stocks was not significantly different, with 14 out of 18 sectors gaining, indicating that capital flows tended to diverge across industries. The Media sector led the uptrend, followed by the Retail sector. Regarding foreign investors, they recorded net selling across all three exchanges: HSX, HNX, and UPCOM. The 1,655–1,665 zone still acts as a resistance level; however, a positive sign is that the VN-Index managed to close above the lower price channel. Given the wide trading range, in the coming sessions, the market will continue to seek a balance within the 1,600–1,665 zone.
