Foreigners' selling pressure will reduce next week

Summary

Today movement of market continued depending heavily on ETFs. Indices decreased, and market breadth was fairly negative. However, supporting level 550 of the VN-Index has still not been broken.

Recommendation

We expect selling pressure of foreign investors will reduce next week. The market therefore can have a slight recovery in short term.

We continued to recommend risk lovers calling the bottom today. Cautious investors should stay out of the market at this time.

Market highlights

Today movement of market continued depending heavily on ETFs. Specifically, market opened in green because of investors' optimism, but it gradually fell and finally closed in red due to selling pressure of ETFs. We found that foreign investors sold a total net value of VND 167 billion.

Market breadth was fairly negative with 113 gainers / 275 losers on both floors. Technical supporting level 550 of the VN-Index has still not been broken today.

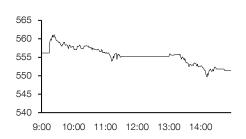

Recommendations

As can be seen, foreigners' activity is the main focus of investors. According to our calculations, the ETF have sold around 700.000 fund certificates today, or approximately VND 190 billion. In comparison with total foreigners' selling value of VND 167 billion (as foregoing mentioned), it is clear that ETFs were the main net sellers today. We believe that their selling pressure will most likely reduce next week due to improving NAV discount rate. Therefore, stock market might increase in short term.

We continue to recommend risk lovers calling the bottom and preparing to sell stocks in rallies next week. On the other hand, we suggest that risk aversion investors should not open long positions.

Technical views

The long red candle today is actively hanging high over the closing price of the previous session, but the slowdown of the VN-index that returned under the support 555 cannot help the market forming the Morning Star pattern, however the liquidity improved compared to previous session.

The market tests the lower support area 550 once more, candlesticks stand on this support. The technical indicators show no signs of recovery during this week, the RSI (15) is entering the oversold zone, around the bottom area in the past, expect a recovery in the short term. The MFI(14) indicator shows that the decline is slowing down, the MACD continues to fall below the Zero line.

The market is likely to fluctuate in a narrow range around 550-555 in the next session, confirmed the demand at the bottom around this area in the past two sessions, VN-Index may not falling under the level 550, the liquidity will continue to maintain and improve in the next few sessions.

Company updates

VSC - Vietnam Container Shipping Corporation (HSX)

For 1Q FY2015, Revenue is estimated at VND185 billion (-6.5% yoy) and pretax profit of VND55 billion, (-5.1% yoy). In 2015, The company plans to reach a revenue of VND 785 billion (down 13,5% yoy), a profit before tax of VND 245 billion (down 23,5% yoy), the company's dividend is about 20%-30%. Planning revenues and profits are lower than the figure in 2014 due to: (1) No revenue from barge transportation. The company sold 2 barges because of the low usage and profit margin; (2)) handled volume expected to be flat (3) income from divestment in associates and reverse provisions last year drops out. In 2015, VSC will focus on finishing the construction of a new port with a totat phase I investment of VND 287 billion. Phase I of the construction is estimated to finish at 11/2015 and the capacity is expected to double.

Our investment view: We forecast that 2015 earnings has no significant changes because the port of Greenport VSC currently is operated beyond designed capacity.

Besides, the fierce competition between ports may lower port charge, affecting the company's revenue. However, we maintain a positive assessment of the potential long-term growth of the company when the new port will be operated in 2016. With the current price of 50,000 dong, VSC is trading at a P / E forward of ~9.
