Market highlights

The market fell sharply by the end of today trading session, two indices VN-Index and HNX-Index therefore closed at their today lows.

Only blue-chips share MSN rose sharply, the other large cap stocks mostly fell.

Some stocks surging significantly in both price and volume today include KVC (+ 10%), HDA (+ 7.14%), SAM (+ 5.8%) and BMI (+ 5.5%).

Recommendations

As previously mentioned, 640 pts is a strong resistance level, and VN-index will not easily break out this level. The recent motivation making VN-index rise significantly is the foreign investors' demand, and we realize that they have been a net sellers (except for participating of two ETFs). Therefore, today correction of VN-Index when approaching to the peak of 640 pts is necessary and reasonable.

However, this correction might last in short time because market movement of the market is still optimistic. Major important stock groups have had a time to lead the market. In addition, stable macroeconomic and Q2 business results will continually support the market in the near future.

Hence, we recommend that investors who have taken profits as our recommendation should observe the direction of market in the next few sessions before opening position again.

Technical views

Bearish divergence signal appeared on our momentum indicators, showing that short-term risk is rising. However, the trend indicator still indicate positive signals. Today black candle has covered the body of yesterday candle, forming bearish engulfing pattern. If VN-Index continues declining tomorrow, reversal signal of this pattern will be confirmed, and VN-Index may then fall back to support level of 610 points.
