Market outlook

In the morning session, the VN-Index fluctuated and increased slightly due to strong inflows of blue-chips such as MSN, VJC, VHM, GAS and especially the impressive recovery of SAB after the code dropped quite sharply yesterday. In the afternoon, the index's gain in the morning was narrowed and closed at 966.21 because SAB's gain in the morning was narrowed and VHM dropped to the reference level. Foreign investors were net sellers today after a series of strong net buying for 3 consecutive days in a week. In BSC's view, the market recovered slightly after 4 consecutive correcting sessions. Liquidity continued to weaken, indicating that the market sentiment remains weak and psychology awaits to spread in regional markets before the Easter holiday.

Technical Analysis

GEX Consolidation

Technical highlights:

- Current trend: Consolidation.
- MACD trend: Negative divergence, MACD is moving sideways.
- RSI: neutral zone, rebounding from lower Bollinger channel.
- MA: MA20 almost converged downward with MA50 and both MA lines are below MA200.

Outlook: GEX is in a short-term correction from the resistance of 25 (Fibonacci 38.2%). Liquidity in recent trading sessions is decreasing, showing that the correction trend is about to end. The stock has reached the support level of 22 (which is also the resistance level during 2M2019). The MACD indicator is signaling a consolidate trend while the RSI supports a slight rebound trend. Movement of 3 MA lines also showed that the stock is about to enter a consolidate state when MA20 converges downward with MA50. Although the trading price is below the range of ichimoku, but the narrowing of the cloud band and its sideways trend indicates a high possibility that the stocks will enter the consolidate trend. Thus, GEX will consolidate and establish a support level at 22 before retesting the resistance level of 25.
