Market outlook

Following the decline of the previous session, VN-Index opened in the morning sunk in the red when weak support from BID, MSN, NVL could not delay the decline of blue-chips such as VCB, GAS, and VIC. In the afternoon, the index mainly moved below reference level before rebounding to go up again in ATC session when VNM gained impressively. In general, the market saw a less positive session as trade tensions between the US and EU escalated with the WTO decision supporting the move to apply tax on USD 7.5 billion European goods. However, the fluctuations at the end of the session still showed that the 990 point level is still a quite strong support level for the market at this time.

Future contracts: Future contracts decreased following VN30. Investors should prioritize selling and buying back with target price around 910 points for long-term contracts.

Covered warrants: In the trading session on October 3, 2019, majority of covered warrants increased in contrast with underlying securities. Trading volume increased. DPM accumulated at 13.5 after touching support level of 12.5. Liquidity remained low level. Technical indicators showed bearish signal in the short term and bullish signal in medium term. Upward adjustment of DPM may create upward momentum on its warrant in the medium term.
